Red Sox Administration

Countless well-deserved tributes have been paid Tom Yawkey during the 26 seasons he has owned the Boston Red Sox and served the club as its President. Speaking at the annual dinner of the Boston Chapter, Baseball Writers' Association of America, on January 29, 1959, Richard Cardinal Cushing referred to Mr. Yawkey as "Boston's own Mr. Baseball". These words summarize concisely the many expressions of esteem tendered Tom Yawkey over the years, and describe accurately the true position he holds throughout the community of all New England, the abode of Red Sox enthusiasm.

It would be almost impossible to list in detail the countless contributions Mr. Yawkey has made to Baseball, not only in Boston and New England, but throughout the National span of the game as well. In addition to the success he has brought to the Boston organization, he has served as Vice President of the American League for the last three years and has been a member of Baseball's Executive Council.

When Tom Yawkey purchased the Boston franchise in February of 1933, he took over the fortunes of a team which had not finished in the first division of the American League standings since 1918, and which had been lodged in the eighth, or cellar spot, for nine of the preceding 11 years. Since then the Red Sox have failed to gain a first division berth only five times, and one of these occurred the first season he took over the club and two others during the years of World War II when the entire structure of Baseball was affected by the manpower requirements of the armed forces.

Under Tom Yawkey's ownership, the Red Sox have been, almost without exception, a factor in the annual American League pennant race. His teams have provided Red Sox fans with the very best in Baseball, great stars of the highest caliber and thrills and excitement occasioned by the outstanding type of Baseball continually on display at Fenway Park. He has made Fenway Park one of the finest stadia in the nation, truly a showplace of sports. His organization has won the esteem of all.

His desires to bring Red Sox fans the ultimate reward of an American League pennant have been fulfilled only in 1946. But even today, starting his 27th season as director of the Red Sox destinies, his aim remains on that same high plane.

Thomas Austin Yawkey was born in Detroit, Michigan, February 21, 1903. He grew up in a wonderful Baseball atmosphere since his foster father, William Yawkey, famed Detroit industrialist, was President of the Detroit Tigers from 1903 through 1907 and continued his interest in the club until his death in 1918.

Baseball continued to be Tom Yawkey's favorite sport throughout his schooldays at The Irving School, Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson, N.Y., and at Yale University, where he achieved both scholastic and athletic distinction.

When Mr. Yawkey purchased the Red Sox, he brought with him to Boston another Irving School alumnus, the famed Baseball star, Eddie Collins, as his General Manager. Mr. Collins continued in an executive capacity with the club until his death in 1951. Meanwhile, Joe Cronin, who became field manager under Mr. Yawkey in 1935, took over the General Manager duties in the autumn of 1947, and continued in that position until his election to the American League presidency in February, 1959.

Now Mr. Yawkey has named Bucky Harris, another famed Baseball figure and his choice as field manager for the Red Sox in 1934, as his chief aide in the front office. Tom Yawkey, thus, looks forward to the future with confidence and enthusiasm, because, as much as he is Owner and President of the Red Sox, he is also his team's most ardent rooter and fan.

THOMAS A. YAWKEY
President

Bucky Harris,

Chief aide to Thomas A. Yawkey in Red Sox administration will be Stanley R. "Bucky" Harris, Executive Vice-President and General Manager.

Bucky is new to this position, but he is far from being new to baseball or as an executive in the game. For over three decades, few men have had more recognition in baseball or were more highly regarded and well liked than Bucky Harris.

He rejoined the Red Sox at the close of the 1956 season as special assistant to Mr. Yawkey and Joseph E. Cronin. When Mr. Cronin was elevated to the Presidency of the American League early this year, Mr. Yawkey immediately decided on Bucky for the post as General Manager.

Port Jervis, N.Y., was the birthplace of Bucky Harris on November 8, 1896, but his family moved to Pittston, Pa., when he was six years old, and it was there that he was given the nickname of "Bucky" by his playmates.

He was 19 years old when he started his professional baseball career in 1916, with Muskegon of the Central League, and his play as a tyro so impressed that he became a member of the Washington club in the closing days of the 1919 season. The following year, as a major league freshman, his play was astonishing and established him as one of the game's outstanding second basemen.

Even more astonishing than his play had been, was the announcement made by President Clark Griffith that, starting the 1924 season, Bucky was to be manager of the Washington club. The appointment came shortly after he reached his 27th birthday.

That was the start of a managerial career which was concluded at the end of the 1956 season when he rejoined the Red Sox. Under him Washington won pennants his first two seasons at the helm, and he was manager of the pennant winning 1947 New York Yankees.

He served as manager of the Washington club for 18 seasons, was leader of the Detroit team seven seasons, manager of the Yankees two seasons, directed the Red Sox to a fourth place finish in 1934, the highest position the club had attained in 16 years. The 1943 season saw him in the National League for the first and only time as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies.

PLEASANT DUTY—One of "Bucky" Harris' first duties as General Manager of the Red Sox was the signing of Ted Williams to a 1959 contract.

CONFERENCE ON PLAYERS—General Manager Harris in conference with Manager Mike Higgins on player personnel.

Front Office Staff

RICHARD H. O'CONNELL

Dick O'Connell is Business Manager of the Red Sox. He is a graduate of Boston College, class of 1936. He served in the Navy as a Lieutenant Commander in World War II. His first assignment when he joined the Red Sox organization in 1946 was as business manager of the Lynn Red Sox of the New England League. He became Director of Park Operations at Fenway Park in 1948 and assumed the title of Business Manager this year. He makes his home at Belmont, Mass.

JOHN M. MALANEY

Jack Malaney, Director, Public Relations, was a veteran newspaperman who covered the activities and games of the Red Sox for many years. He was President of the Baseball Writers' Association of America in 1944 and was official scorer of seasonal games, World Series and All-Star games. He formerly was occupied in press liaison for the Red Sox before assuming his present duties. His home is at West Roxbury, Mass.

THOMAS B. DOWD

This native of Worcester, Mass., a Holy Cross graduate, 1923, has the often fantastic chore of the mass movement over thousands of miles involving the schedule demands of the Red Sox, and yet this is only a portion of the many duties of a Traveling Secretary. Tom also is well known as a speaker and toastmaster, as a former football official, and, recently, as a radio commentator. His home is at West Roxbury, Mass.

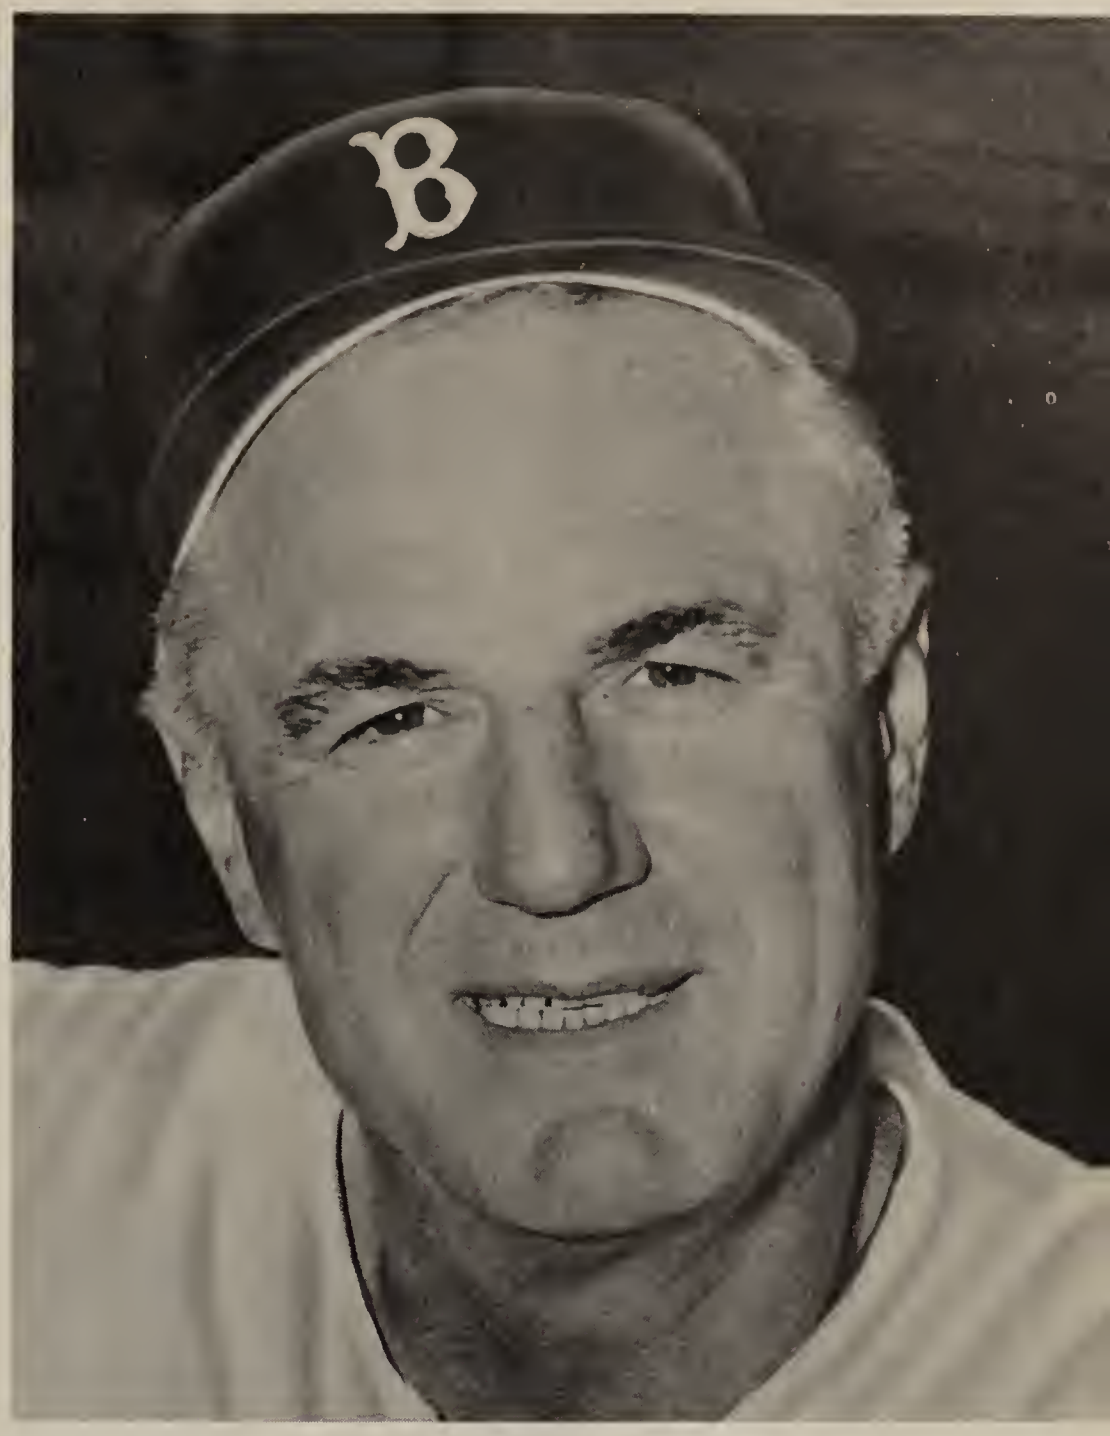

HIRAM W. MASON

Hi Mason, Treasurer, started his baseball front office career in 1909, thus completed his Golden Anniversary last season. His start was with the St. Louis Browns. His later association was with the St. Louis Cardinals as secretary and treasurer. His career with the Red Sox started in 1926 when he came to Boston to act as traveling secretary, and a few years later he took over his present duties. His home is at Belmont, Mass.

Red Sox Manager

William F. Jurges became manager of the Red Sox on July 3, 1959, after Mike Higgins had resigned the post he had held since the start of the 1955 season.

Jurges had been a coach of the Washington Senators since 1956, becoming an aid and third base coach for Manager Charley Dressen and the same to Dressen's successor, Harry Lavagetto.

As a player, Jurges was one of the game's outstanding shortstops over a period of 17 seasons, all in the National League. He was with the Chicago Cubs for nine years and a portion of another, and was seven years with the New York Giants.

A Brooklyn, N. Y. boy, born May 9, 1908, Bill's professional baseball career started in 1927. Signed by the Chicago Cubs system, he was assigned to the Manchester, N. H. team of the old New England League and he spent two seasons there. Two more prepping years were spent with the Reading team of the International League.

The Cubs brought him up in the spring of 1931, but he was not quite ready and he had a short stay with the Louisville team.

In 1932 he was back with the Cubs and this time for a long stay—seven years. He was traded to the New York Giants in the winter of 1938 and from 1938 through 1945 he was the Giants' shortstop.

Bill had a couple of experiences as a manager. He handled the Cedar Rapids club of the Three Eye League in 1950 and the team finished fifth. In 1953 he was asked to take over the Hagerstown team of the Piedmont League on July 11 and he piloted his team to a second place finish.

Red Sox Coaches

RUDY YORK

Rudolph Preston York is a new addition this year to the Red Sox coaching staff. Rudy gained his greatest baseball fame while a member of the Detroit team from 1937 through the 1945 season principally because of his home run hitting power. He became a member of the Red Sox in 1946 and was a potent factor in the winning of the pennant that year. He set a baseball record for hitting most home runs in one month with 18 in August, 1937. Served as a batting instructor in the Red Sox system last season. Makes his home at Cartersville, Ga.

DEL BAKER

Delmer David Baker, who handles the first base coaching duties, is a veteran of many baseball years. He broke into the game in 1911 and started his coaching career in 1933. Del managed the Detroit club from August, 1938, through the 1942 season, and also has seen service as a manager in the Pacific Coast and Texas Leagues. He served as a Red Sox coach from 1945 through 1948, returning to assume his present occupation in 1953. He was born May 3, 1892, in Sherwood, Oregon.

JACK BURNS

John Irving Burns, one of Greater Boston's outstanding baseball products, is now in his fifth season as the Red Sox third base coach. He was born in Cambridge, Mass., August 31, 1907, and now makes his home at suburban Watertown, Mass. Jack broke into baseball in 1928, and started his major league career with the St. Louis Browns in 1930, and completed his big league time in 1936 with Detroit. He managed Red Sox farm teams at Scranton, Pa, 1949-51, and at Albany, N.Y., 1952-54, handling many of the players who are now under his tutelage with the Red Sox.

DAVE FERRISS

David Meadow Ferriss is the Red Sox pitching coach. He proved that he knew how to pitch with the Boston club from 1945 through 1950, winning 21 games as a rookie, and 25, plus a World Series triumph, in 1946. This will be his fifth season here as pitching coach for Mike Higgins, with whom he also was associated in the minor leagues, starting at Louisville in 1953. Dave is a native of Shaw, Miss., having been born there December 5, 1921, and still makes his home there in the off-season. He attended Mississippi State College and is a World War II Army Veteran.

A 1975 Prospect

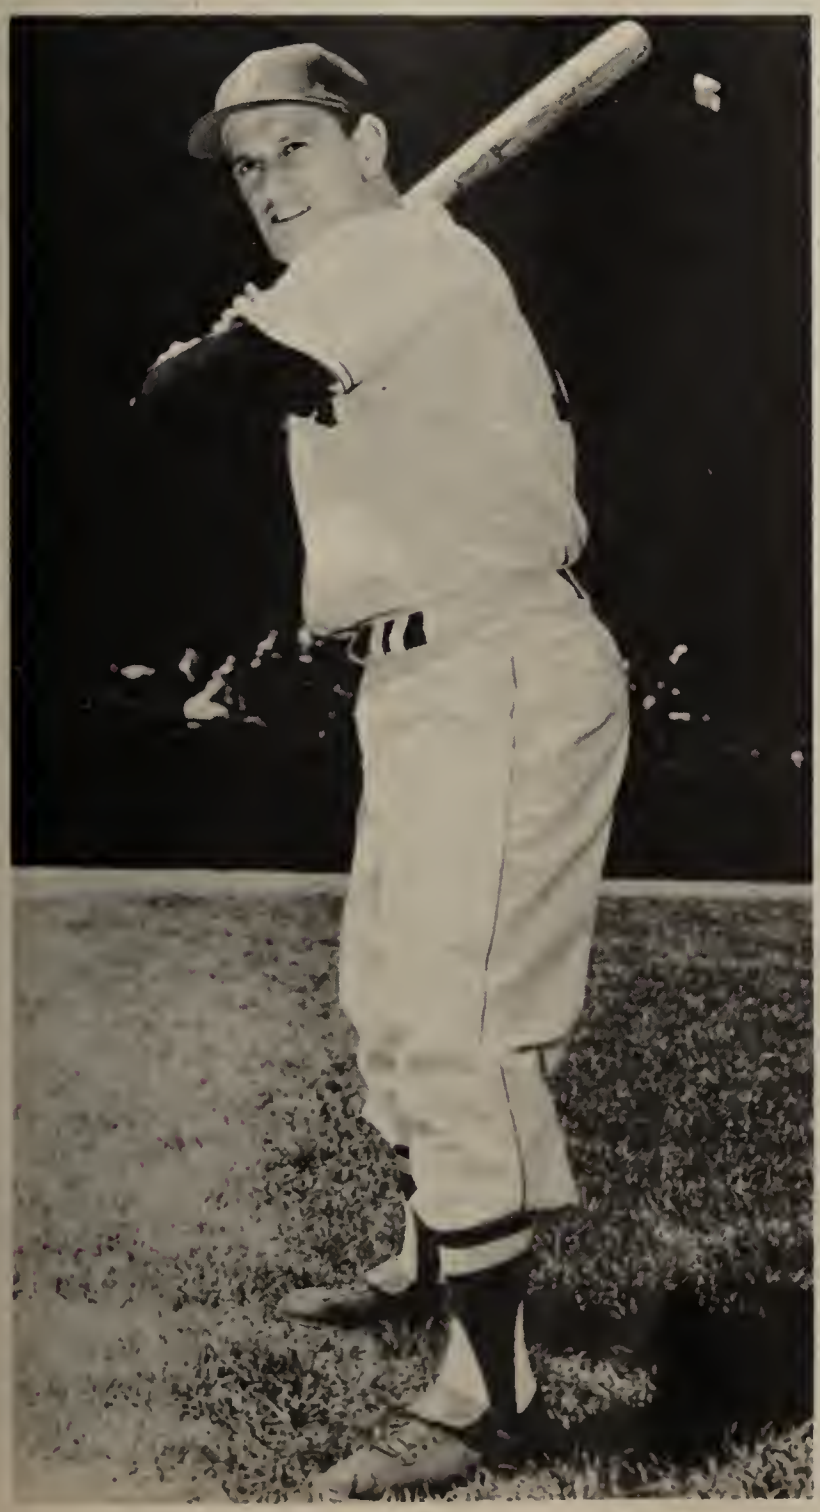

JIMMY MALZONE IS YOUNG, not having reached his fourth birthday yet, but he "stole the show" in the Father and Sons game on June 21. At the rate he is progressing, Jimmy should be ready to take over at third base for the Red Sox by 1975, by which time his scintillating father should be ready to retire.

MALZONE, Frank James INFIELDER FRANK

Born: February 28, 1930, Bronx, N. Y. Ht.: 5' 10"; Wt.: 180 lbs. Brown eyes; Black hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Oneonta, N. Y.

Elected by fellow players as American League All Star third baseman; second season in row he held that honor, having been named by Manager Casey Stengel to 1957 Dream Game team. Enjoyed another banner year in 1958 after being named Sophomore of the Year 1957; he was ruled ineligible for rookie honors because of previous brief service with Red Sox. Among 1958 feats:—led club in hits, games played and at bats; second on Red Sox only to league-leader Jackie Jensen in runs batted in; won unanimous recognition as outstanding major league fielding third baseman. Batted .341 at Fenway Park. Signed in 1948 following graduation from Samuel Gompers High, Bronx. Won All Star honors in 1948 in the Can.-Am. League and in 1955 in American Association. An Army veteran. Bow and arrow hunting is his hobby. Alternated his winter residence between Oneonta, N. Y., and Needham, Mass., serving Greater Boston tire company as vice president. Married and has a son.

A Championship Well Earned

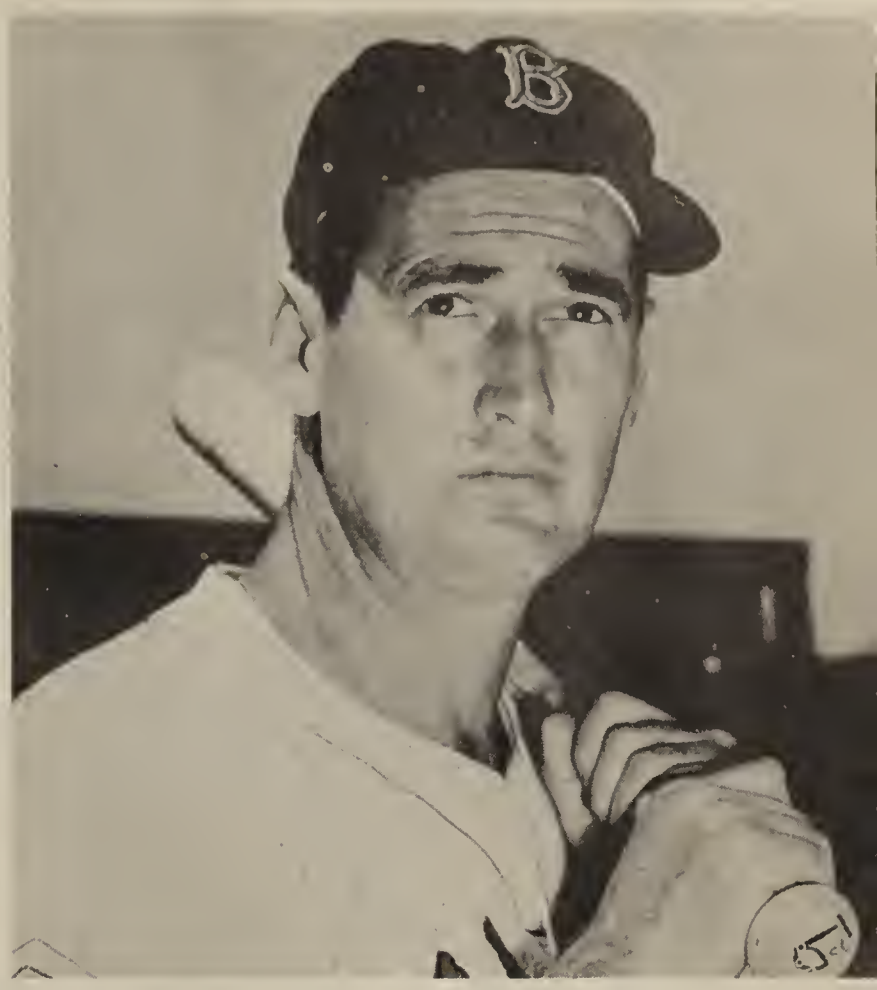

TED WILLIAMS WON the American League batting title in 1958 and again was awarded the Louisville Slugger silver bat, emblematic of the championship, which he is fondly examining in this picture.

WILLIAMS, Theodore Samuel — OUTFIELDER — TED

Born: August 30, 1918, San Diego, Calif. Ht.: 6' 4"; Wt.: 198 lbs. Green-brown eyes; Brown hair. Bats: Left; Throws: Right. Home: Miami, Fla.

Won his sixth American League batting title as the highlight of still another great season for one of the greatest figures in Baseball history . . . Battled teammate Pete Runnels for the crown right to the last day of the 1958 campaign . . . Off to a slow start, did not enter the .300 class to stay until June 30 . . . Batted at blistering .411 pace during final month . . . Took over batting lead for first time on second-last day of season, .326 to Runnels' .324 . . . Hit .329 at Fenway Park, .328 on road to lead club in that department . . . At his batting best against world-champion Yankees with .452 average (.429 in Boston, .500 at Yankee Stadium) . . . Played in his 14th All Star Game . . . Now fifth among all-time major league greats in lifetime homers:—Babe Ruth 714; Jimmy Foxx 534; Mel Ott 511; Lou Gehrig 494; Williams 482 . . . Will become 20-year man in American League, May 30, 1959 . . . Has 17 lifetime grand slam home runs, adding two to this total last season . . . Served as Marine Corps pilot during World War II and again in Korean conflict.

RED SOX

FENWAY PARK

BOSTON 15, MASSACHUSETTS

With sincere appreciation to our fans,

Bill Jurges

Manager

CONFERENCE WITH MANAGER—Tom Brewer Jr., Matty Keough, Scott Baumann and Mark Runnels get their orders from Manager Mike Higgins in his office as he made out the batting order for the game.

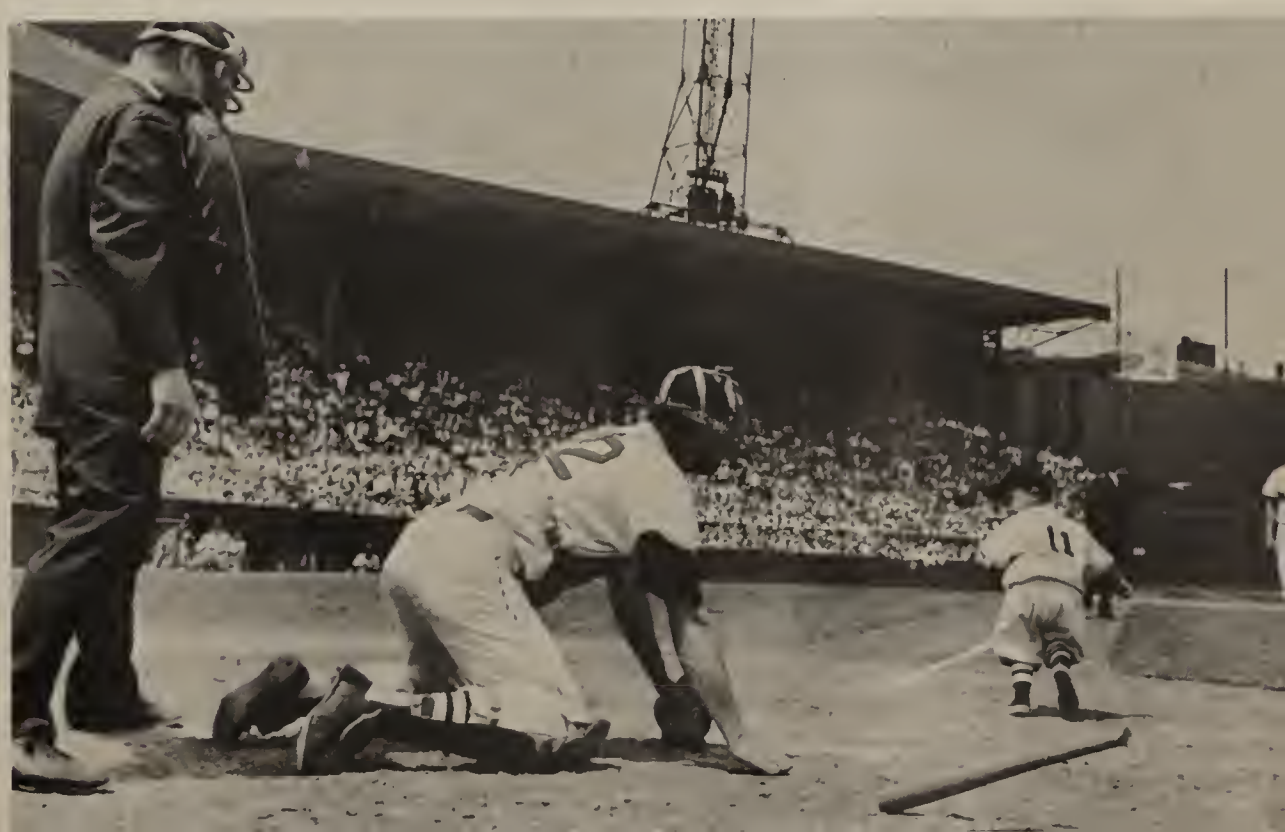

Father's Day Fun

Sons stole the show on Father's Day at Fenway Park, June 21, 1959, when the offspring of Red Sox players played a "game" with their Dads prior to the regularly scheduled event. The "Son Sox" made their own rules as they cavorted in uniforms the duplicate of those their fathers wear and delighted and thrilled not only the thousands in the stands but untold more thousands the country over who watched the "game" for 10 minutes on TV. It was unanimously voted the "Event of the Year".

"IT WAS A STRIKE"—Sammy White Jr., whipped off his mask and protested Umpire John Steven's decision just as he had seen his Dad perform in regular games.

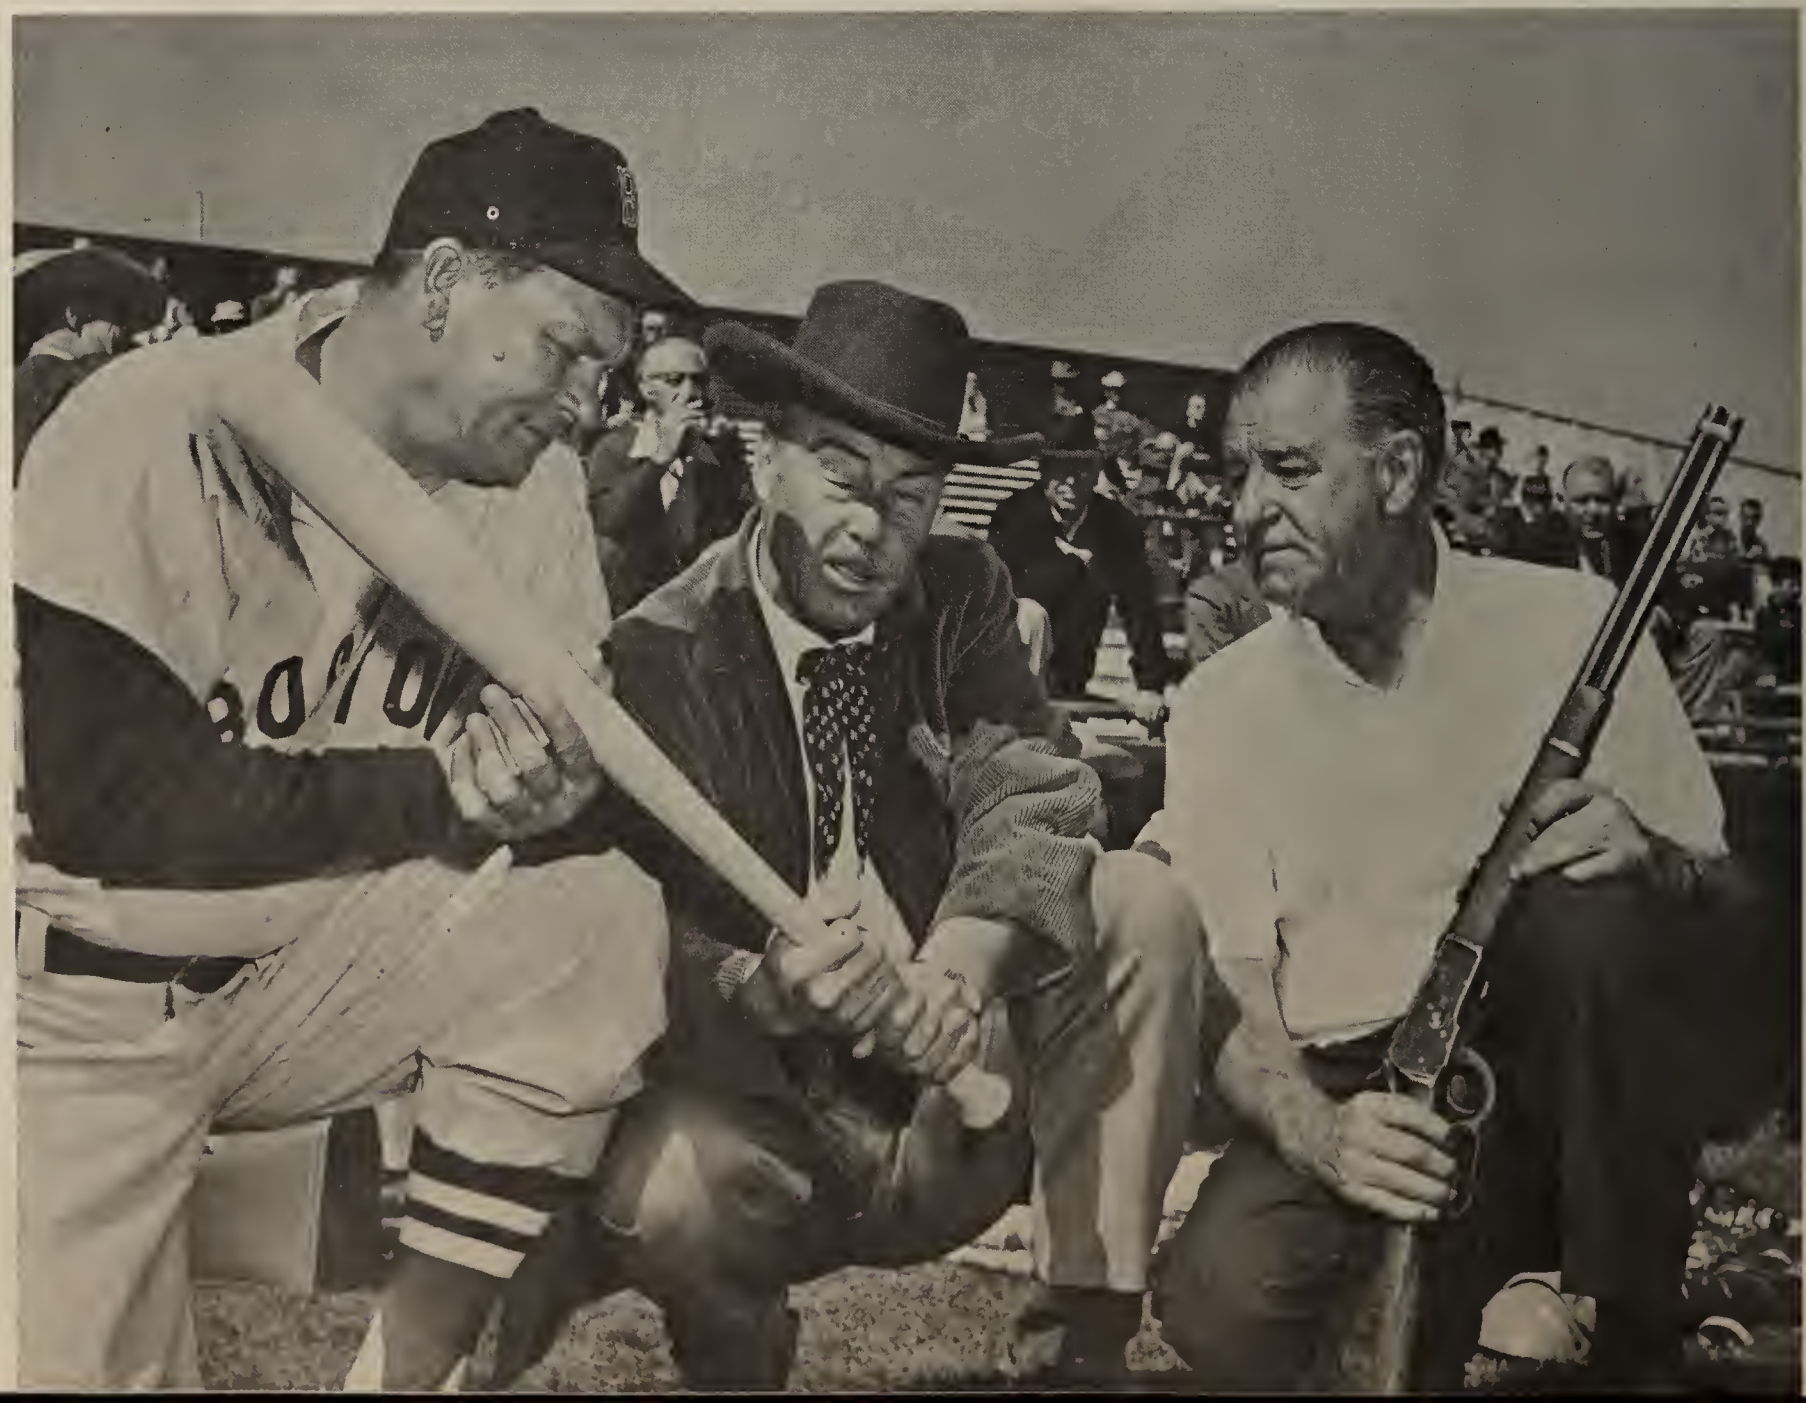

RUNNING IT OUT—Jimmy Malzone, age 3 years and 7 months, swung his bat and ran, and who was there to object when he headed for third base instead of first. Not even his Dad (on extreme right) tried to change his course, and Catcher Sammy White and Umpire John Stevens approved of his choice of direction.

THE OFFICIAL GREETING TO SCOTTSDALE–In the "old West" (and Scottsdale's style and decor is "old West" as much as it can be) it is the Sheriff rather than the Mayor who does the greeting. When the Red Sox were ready to start their spring conditioning work, along came the Sheriff and a pair of his Possemen to welcome the team. The Sheriff greets Manager Mike Higgins (center), and Jackie Jensen (left) and Ted Williams (right) are greeted by possemen.

SCOTTSDALE IS A RECREATIONAL SPOT, but its mountains and desert areas make it an ideal location for movie and TV outfits. One of the better known of the present day TV "Westerns" seen on screens the country over is "26 Men", and the studio for that outfit is situated right in Scottsdale. In this picture we see Tris Coffin, the star of "26 Men", as he visited the Red Sox camp armed with his rifle which he handed to General Manager Bucky Harris (left) as he discussed hitting with another weapon, a baseball bat, with Manager Mike Higgins.

SCOTTSDALE'S GRANDSTAND—This is the view from center field of the stands at Scottsdale Stadium which can comfortably seat 4250 spectators.

Spring Training at Scottsdale

The annual conditioning of a baseball club, which also includes the moulding of the squad for the long season ahead has become an integral part of major league baseball. The site of spring training also is important as weather conditions as well as facilities for the baseball work must be as nearly comparable as possible to mid-summer conditions. And being the scene of the spring training of a baseball club has become important and valuable to the community selected.

Scottsdale, Arizona, situated about 12 miles from Phoenix, became the spring training site of the Red Sox this year. It was the first change in the scene of the spring work since 1933 when Sarasota, Fla. was selected and the work has since gone on there annually with the exception of the war years.

Arizona offered a different type of weather and different teams for the exhibition games played as part of the conditioning, and these games decide the makeup of the squad retained for seasonal play.

The pitchers and catchers report for work a week in advance of the other players, this year on Feb. 19. By Feb. 26 the entire squad was in action with the first game scheduled for March 7.

A TOUCH OF THE WEST—The motif at Scottsdale is "old West" and is carried out throughout the city. So the front of the new and up-to-date baseball stadium has that appearance.

SPECTATOR'S VIEW—There is an unobstructed view from any section of the grandstand of the spacious playing field at Scottsdale where the center field barrier is 430 feet distant.

MAIL ORDER DEPARTMENT—Fans from all sections of New England make ticket reservations far in advance. This picture shows a section of the department which handles all ticket requests.

Behind The Scenes

Ticket offices where the fans can obtain tickets for all Red Sox games are easily accessible to all. In addition to the regular booths where tickets are obtained before each game, there is a main ticket office at Fenway Park at which fans can also get tickets for future games.

Throughout New England the distant fans take advantage of the mail order department and make their ticket reservations often far in advance of the date of the game to be seen.

TICKET OFFICE—Tickets for all Red Sox games are obtained at this office at Fenway Park.

"THIS IS FENWAY PARK, COPLEY 7-2525"— One of the busiest spots in a baseball park is the telephone switchboard room where the cheery voice of Miss Helen Robinson greets callers.

A VIEW OF THE TICKET VAULT—The countless thousands of tickets which must be provided for all the games of the season are carefully racked in the ticket vault which is under the supervision of Ticket Manager Paul Cunniff.

A CORNER OF THE TEAM TRAINER'S ROOM— An up-to-date trainer's room at a major league baseball park is a small edition of a hospital. The room at Fenway Park has all the equipment necessary for the caring of the players and is under the able direction of Trainer Jack Fadden and the Assistant Trainer, Win Green.

Covering The Red Sox

FENWAY PARK'S NEWSPAPER ROW—The main section of the Press Box situated on the roof of the grandstand at Fenway Park directly behind home plate.

The always active Press Box at Fenway Park is one of the busiest in the country as the newspaper coverage of the activities of the Red Sox is perhaps more widespread and outstanding than any other team receives.

The many Boston newspapers all have representatives at each of the games, and men from newspapers of surrounding communities around New England as well as from the wire services which cover the nation also can be found at the games. A large delegation of baseball experts follows the team on all its games away from Boston.

The Sports Sections of newspapers are said to be the most read pages. The well written and accurate reports of the baseball games and the talented and interesting descriptions of the many and varied human interest angles connected with the team and its personnel help make the Red Sox a part of the household of every New England fan.

Nearby is a list of the Boston members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America of which Boston's chapter is one of the largest units.

On The Air

Curt Gowdy is in his ninth year as the "Voice of the Boston Red Sox." He has become a household name throughout New England with his colorful and accurate play-by-play accounts of the Red Sox games.

Gowdy has also established a national reputation as one of the top sportcasters in America. In 1958 he won the Look Magazine's TV Award for outstanding sportcasting on the telecast of the World Series. Gowdy also broadcasts the country's top college football games and the professional basketball game of the week over the nation wide NBC-TV network. He also conducts his own sport show over WHDH at 6:15 each evening.

Working with Gowdy for the fifth consecutive year will be personable Bob Murphy. The former Oklahoman also has a wide following in New England. His baseball savvy and personality have been well appreciated.

Rounding out the Red Sox broadcasting crew is Bill Crowley.

The Red Sox games are originated by WHDH in Boston and carried on a 50 station network throughout New England. Station WHDH-TV, Channel 5, will serve as the Boston outlet for selected home and away televised games.

The Narragansett Brewing Company, the Atlantic Refining Company and the Ford Dealers of New England will again co-sponsor the Red Sox games.

Additional changes for 1959 in the Farm System have been made in keeping the Red Sox program marching steadily along the path of progress. Particular attention will be paid to the younger players who will be with the lower classification of leagues in order to further their preparation for an eventual place on the parent team.

John Murphy, who gained fame during his playing days as one of the game's great all-time relief pitchers, is in control of the entire farm organization.

The Minneapolis Millers, with a reputation as an outstanding baseball organization in an outstanding baseball territory, became the top Red Sox affiliate a year ago when the franchise and territory of the club was received as partial payment for the San Francisco club.

With the aid of many players developed in the Boston farm system and led by Gene Mauch, a former Red Sox infielder, Minneapolis achieved great success in 1958. The team won its league pennant, was victor in playoff games—four out of five from Wichita, the Braves' farm team, and four straight from Denver, the Yankees' farm team, and then won the Little World Series championship with four straight victories over the Montreal team of the International League, the Dodgers' farm team.

The Millers will continue to be the top team in the system this year with Mauch again at the helm. Working agreements for 1959 have been arranged with Allentown of the Eastern League, Raleigh of the Carolina League, Waterloo of the Midwest League, Corning of the New York-Penn. League and Alpine of the Sophomore League, assuring prospective Red Sox stars of the very best of playing conditions along the path to the major leagues.

Farm System

The very best of instruction is also assured these Boston-bound ball players since top men of the teaching trade are assigned the managerial tasks on these farm clubs. Warren Robinson will direct the Class A Allentown team, Ken Deal the Class B Raleigh club, Elmer Yoter the Class D Waterloo team, Len Okrie the Class D Corning team, and Eddie Popowski the Class D Alpine team in Texas with the assistance of Fred Maguire of the Red Sox scouting staff, who will help in the development of the young players.

All these men are well versed in the Red Sox system, and have the ability to pass along the instruction so necessary for advancement in baseball today.

There will be a staff of 25 Red Sox scouts, all with long baseball experience and backgrounds, continually combing the country for top prospects, and who also are ever ready to impart instruction and advice to help these young hopefuls reach their goal with the Red Sox.

An instructional school was held at Ocala, Florida, in February and March with many of the young players being invited to attend and receive extra and individual attention to possibly accelerate their progress.

The Red Sox farm system organization is thorough in every respect. Thus youngsters who become part of it are fortunate. Their early baseball life, both in spring training and throughout the regular season, will take place amid major league-like surroundings patterned on those enjoyed by the parent club. Their progress is checked continually and personal assistance in every way is available to them at all times.
